AIRMEN MAY USE SISTER SHIP

To Circulate Petition For Boulevard Lights Here

ACTION TAKEN AFTER TALKS, COST IS LOW

City May Soon Have Big "White Way"—Clean-Up Week Dates Also Set.

Boulevard lighting was the subject discussed at a big meeting of the Chamber of Commerce, Tuesday night, and following two explanatory talks by J. B. Poston, general manager of the Ohio Utilities company, H. K. Flint and W. E. Metzger of the Westinghouse company, a resolution was passed by the body endorsing a new ornamental light system of 70 lamps for Circleville, and authorizing a committee to proceed to circulate a petition among property owners for the immediate installation of the new "white way."

The pertinent points brought out by Mr. Flint were that good illumination reduced crime and traffic accidents, not only stimulates business but has an actual business value.

Cincinnati, which holds the record for street traffic accidents in the state, is actually reducing these by introducing super illumination. On thoroughfares where bright lights have been introduced, accidents have been reduced to a minimum.

Several ways to pay for the cost of extra lighting. One is taxation by assessing each property owner on the front footage basis by circulating a petition among the property owners residing in the zone where the extra illumination is to be placed.

"These taxes follow" along the same line as other civic improvements, the city pays for the intersection lighting, and it would continue under the law governing such expenditure under the statutes. Although the city has a contract with the lighting company for street lamps, this could be changed to fit in with the new lighting system if so desired.

—Other cities in the state are taking up the project and are establishing super lighting systems, and they have found that the extra cost has proven beneficial and is the most economical system of street illumination.

Cost Not Prohibitive
The cost is not prohibitive. The installation is the heaviest, then comes maintenance, the latter covering lamps, glassware, breakage and cleaning. The upkeep is a proposition that can be handled, either by contract with the local company or by the city.

"We have found that a contract covering installation, maintenance, glassware, lamp renewals, lamp cleaning and energy which you call current, is better taken care of by local companies than by the city," the speaker said.

In the district mapped out it would take 70 posts, placed opposite each other one hundred feet apart. The equipment consists of transformers, regulators and parkway cables. The latter are incased in steel armour. The cable is protected by being encased, for often when excavations are made, cable is cut by picks and the extra covering is its protection.

400-Candle Power Lamps
The lamps, which are of 400 candle power, would cost to operate, on the Washington medium light system, $49 a year, or $26 a year if burned up to 12 o'clock. The plan is to have all lights on until 12 o'clock and every other light burn the rest of the night.

The 11 lamps that now illuminate the business district cost the city $30 a year a piece and this (Continued on Page Two)

FRESH EVIDENCE PLACED AGAINST "OIL" OFFICIALS

WASHINGTON, April 18 — Fresh evidence, indicating that former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall wrote the mysterious oil memorandum found in the files of the senate public lands committee in January, 1924 was unearthed today at the senate oil inquiry.

The unsigned oil memorandum, a mystery for four years, declared Fall had never gotten a dollar from Henry F. Sinclair and that Sinclair had never "spent a dollar on Fall's ranch." If actually written by Fall, it would shatter the story that Sinclair paid $200,000 for an interest in Fall's ranch.

With Clarence C. Chase, Fall's son-in-law on the witness stand, it was known that the memorandum apparently was written by the same person who wrote a letter to Senator Lenroot (R) of Wisconsin, on Dec. 13, 1924, and signed by Fall. Fall has never denied writing the letter.

At top a slice of the tiny Greenerly Island that is the haven of the German-Irish trio of trans-Atlantic fliers; lower left, lighthouse at Point Amour, the nearest point to the island where the aviators landed; lower right, the native dog sleds of Greenerly Island that were used to carry messages from the stranded fliers to the nearest radio station; center inset, 18-year-old Stewart Davis of Manchester, N. H., amateur radio operator, who received and relayed to the waiting world the first message from the three intrepid airmen.

Dawes Selected By Convention At Ohio State

COLUMBUS, O., April 18 (INS)— Vice President Charles Dawes was the presidential selection of Ohio State university students in a mock convention sponsored by Phi Delta Gamma, national legal fraternity.

Senator George Norris was selected for vice-president. The affair was called the "Great American Party convention" and approximately 500 students participated. Dawes was nominated on the seventh ballot but Hoover was almost nominated on the second.

Other nominations before the convention were: Will Rogers, Judge Florence Allen, Atlee Pomerene, Charles Hughes, Frank Lowden and Al Smith.

STRANGER IS FOUND DEAD; LITTLE KNOWN

A man identified as James W. Buck, living at 129 Mingo street was found dead Wednesday morning. On examination it was found that he had died from a severe case of influenza.

Some mystery is connected with Buck's death as nothing definite can be established in the way of relations or intimate friends. On advice from an employee of the Winor cannery factory it was found that he had worked there off and on for some time.

No information could be gained here however as Buck was of a reticent disposition and had said nothing of any relationships.

In looking through his effects it was found that he had had quite a number of business dealings with various houses in Huntington, W. Va., and Ironton, Ohio. A few deposit slips of the Second National Bank of Circleville offered a clue and Doctor O. H. Dunton, coroner, is following them up. An empty envelope that had contained a personal letter from some one in Huntington offered no clue and as this was the only letter of personal nature in his possession a more definite investigation will relate to his death.

It is supposed to be between fifty and fifty-five years of age. He also, from a general appearance, seems to have suffered considerably from a cold.

MARVIN STEELEY WINS IN COURT VERDICT TODAY

In the case of the Ohio Casualty company against Marvin Steeley in Justice E. C. Frier's court this morning a verdict was given in favor of the defendant.

Mr. Steeley agreed to settle the claim for $2,900 but the Casualty company sued for $3,500.

"The trial grew out of an accident in which the defendant backed his car into a machine owned by the Casualty company and Mr. Steeley agreed to pay for the repair of the machine."

Mr. Steeley is a Bureau insurance agent and is represented in the trial by Atty. H. H. Walters and Geo. K. Wright, agent for the insurance company. The Ohio Casualty company was represented by Atty. Paul Adams and S. G. Radon, agent for the Casualty company.

WAR CLOUDS OVER CHINESE NATION

LONDON, April 18 — War clouds loomed darker over the Chinese horizon today.

Serious negotiations between the Nationalists and North Chinese are being fought along a stretch of the border, according to a dispatch to the Daily Express from its Tokyo correspondent.

British vessels have been fired upon nine miles below Hankow, according to a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company from Hong Kong.

Officers Walk With Prisoners When Car Balks

Witness the new drama, "Hitting the Pike."

And with it came tragedy and footsore pedestrians.

Tragedy to Forrest Moss and Roy Walliser. They were wanted at Chillicothe, where they are charged, along with Sherman Lowery who was taken to Chillicothe Monday, with stealing a set of harness.

And sore feet to others!

It happened like this:

Deputy Sheriffs John G. Ward Jr., and Carl Porter, accompanied by Milton Friedman and John Rooney, started back following the arrest of Moss and Walliser, when their car balked, sneezed a couple of times, and finally had to be abandoned entirely for the great open spaces and hard pike.

Two weary officers, two equally weary companions, two tired prisoners—all in all, six—struck out for Circleville at the Sturn and Dillard camp.

Mit's efforts to "thumb down" a ride for the sextette was fruitless, but at last came a telephone, a hurried call for relief, and the weary six have to in a gas buggy that would run.

The arrest was made at the home of Pete Seymour on the Jackson pike about 9 miles west of the city. The car in which the sheriff and his helpers had gone to the scene was one that had been confiscated by the county and its efforts to go failed beyond the "Red River" bridge which is about 5 miles from this city.

STINGLEY POLING RITES ON FRIDAY

To a crowd of Stingley Poling Rites on Friday afternoon at two o'clock burial in the church cemetery. The funeral will be under the direction of Moravian Melvin Ruch.

LATEST WORD IS GIVEN OUT ON AIR CREW

Details of Harrowing Flight Against Elements Is Related.

SEVEN ISLANDS, QUE., April 18 — (INS)—The three heroes of the latest epic of the skies—Capt. Herman Koehl, Baron von Huenfeld and Major James E. Fitzmaurice—may return to civilization out of the frozen northland in the Junkers plane F-13, a sister ship of the trans-Atlantic conqueror Bremen, according to information received here today.

Fitzmaurice, who flew from Greenely Island with aviator Charles ("Duke") Schiller to get spare parts for the Bremen, so that repairs could be made rested over night at Clarke City, near this place. Schiller had sent word back to Greenely Island that he would carry the three trans-Atlantic fliers to Mitchell field or to Murray Bay, turning back from Clarke City. But up to the time this was written Schiller had not received any reply.

Land Lines Swamped
Both the meager land lines and the radio are swamped with messages and hampered by foul weather.

The storms which drove the Bremen to earth, when its gasoline supply had become practically exhausted, have continued intermittently since last Friday. Gales of wind and snow sweep the Gulf of St. Lawrence, driving dangerous ice floes through the water and darkening the air with whirling snow flakes. Flying conditions are perilous.

Miss Herta Junkers, who flew from Curtiss Field, N. Y., to Montreal in the F-13, traveled on to Murray Bay by rail. There is a big air depot at Murray Bay owned by Trans-Continental Airways, Ltd.

The spectacular flight of the Bremen is almost equalled in interest by the dramatic circumstances which attended the end of the historic sky voyage.

Forced down upon the surface of a frozen lake on Greenely Island after riding the clouds for 36 and one-half hours, Koehl and von Huenfeld have maintained their vigil over their damaged machine upon the tiny, isolated and ice-bound island while the whole civilized world hungered for the details of their adventure.

More News of Adventure
Fragmentary news is coming out of Point Amour, the nearest wireless station to Greenely Island, throwing fresh light upon the hazardous venture of the daring airmen.

Throughout Thursday night Koehl and Fitzmaurice, alternately at the controls, held the Bremen on her westbound course. They felt that victory was in their grasp when they ran into treacherous weather between 450 and 500 miles off the Newfoundland coast on Friday morning.

The skies were so overcast with fog—the blanket reaching 2,000 feet in the air—that the darkness of midnight settled down over the surface of the sea. It is now revealed that, except for the long, fruitless cruise over Labrador and the adjacent Atlantic while the men were lost, they could easily have made Mitchell Field. Shortly after daybreak Friday morning the Bremen passed the North American coast line. Below them they could see forests and mountains, but a fresh storm blew up and the plane's lights failed and instead of turning south the plane appears to have continued in a northwesterly direction.

Battle Headwinds
For more than 30 hours after crossing the coast line the Bremen sped through the air, battling headwinds and snow and bobbing through air pockets. It was at noon on Friday that the airmen sighted the lighthouse on Greenely Island.

Gets Gun Ready
When the plane was let down upon the frozen pond upon Greenely Island the airmen feared they were in an unwholesome district infested possibly by wolves. Von Huenfeld, who carried a German army service pistol, had the weapon ready in case of an attack by wild beasts.

All three of the men were very tired. They feared they could not get news of their landing into the (Continued On Page Two)

FRESH EVIDENCE PLACED AGAINST "OIL" OFFICIALS

WASHINGTON, April 18—Fresh evidence, indicating that Former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall wrote the mysterious oil memorandum found in the files of the senate public lands committee in January, 1924, was unearthed today at the senate's oil inquiry.

The unsigned oil memorandum, a mystery for four years, declared Fall had never gotten a dollar from Harry F. Sinclair and that Sinclair had never "spent a dollar on Fall's ranch." If actually written by Fall, it would shatter the story that Sinclair paid $233,000 for an interest in Fall's ranch.

With Clarence C. Chase, Fall's son-in-law on the witness stand, it was shown that the memorandum apparently was written by the same person who wrote a letter to Senator Lenroot (R) of Wisconsin, on Dec. 13, 1924, and signed by Fall. Fall has never denied writing the letter.

Dawes Selected By Convention At Ohio State

COLUMBUS, O., April 18 (INS)—Vice President Charles Dawes was the presidential selection of Ohio State university students in a mock convention sponsored by Phi Delta Gamma, national legal fraternity.

Senator George Norris was selected for vice-president. The affair was called the "Great American Party convention" and approximately 500 students participated.

Dawes was nominated on the seventh ballot but Hoover was almost nominated on the second.

Other nominations before the convention were: Will Rogers, Judge Florence Allen, Atlee Pomerene, Charles Hughes, Frank Lowden and Al Smith.

MARVIN STEELEY WINS IN COURT VERDICT TODAY

In the case of the Ohio Casualty company against Marvin Steeley in Justice E. C. Friece's court this morning a verdict was given in favor of the defendant.

Mr. Steeley agreed to settle the claim for $3.90 but the Casualty company sued for $15.65.

The trial grew out of an accident in which the defendant backed his car into a machine insured by the Casualty company and Mr. Steeley agreed to pay for the repair of the plaintiff's car.

Mr. Steeley carried Farm Bureau insurance and was represented in the trial by Atty. Barton Walters and Geo. K. Wright, agent for the insurance company. The Ohio Casualty company was represented by Atty. Paul Adkins and S. G. Rader, agent for the Casualty company.

STRANGER IS FOUND DEAD; LITTLE KNOWN

Influenza Thought to Have Caused Death of Man in Circleville.

A man identified as James W. Buck, living at 129 Mingo street was found dead Wednesday morning. On examination it was found that he had died from a severe case of influenza.

Some mystery is connected with Buck's death as nothing definite can be established in the way of relations or intimate friends. On advice from an employee of the Winorr canning factory it was found that he had worked there off and on for some time.

No information could be gained here however as Buck was of a retiring disposition and had said nothing of any relationships.

In looking through his effects it was found that he had had quite a number of business dealings with various houses in Huntington, W. Va., and Ironton, Ohio. A few deposit slips of the Second National Bank of Circleville offered a clue and Doctor O. H. Dunton, coroner, is following them up. An empty envelope that had contained a personal letter from some one in Huntington offered no clue and as this was the only letter of personal nature in his possession a more definite identification will rest with his business notes.

Buck appears to be between fifty and fifty-five years of age. He also, from his general appearance, seems to have suffered considerably from his illness.

STINGLEY POLING RITES ON FRIDAY

The funeral will be under the direction of Mortician Melvin Rinehart.

Officers Walk With Prisoners When Car Balks

Witness the new drama, "Hitting the Pike."

And with it came tragedy and footsore pedestrians.

Tragedy to Forrest Moss and Roy Waliser. They were wanted at Chillicothe, where they are charged, along with Sherman Lowery who was taken to Chillicothe Monday, with stealing a set of harness.

And sore feet to others! It happened like this:

Deputy Sheriffs John G. Ward Jr., and Carl Porter, accompanied by Milton Friedman and John Rooney, started back following the arrest of Moss and Waliser, when their car balked, sneezed a couple of times, and finally had to be abandoned entirely for the great open spaces and hard pike.

Two weary officers, two equally weary companions, two tired prisoners—all in all, six!—struck out for Circleville at the Sturn and Dillard camp.

Mitt's efforts to "thumb down" a ride for the sextette was fruitless, but at last came a telephone, a hurried call for relief, and the weary six hove to in a gas buggy that would run.

The arrest was made at the home of Pete Seymour on the Jackson pike about 9 miles west of the city. The car in which the sheriff and his helpers had gone to the scene was one that had been confiscated by the county and its efforts to go failed beyond the "Red River" bridge which is about 5 miles from this city.

WAR CLOUDS OVER CHINESE NATION

LONDON, April 18—War clouds loomed darker over the Chinese horizon today.

British vessels have been fired upon nine miles below Hankow, according to a dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company from Hong Kong.

LATEST WORD IS GIVEN OUT ON AIR CREW

Details of Harrowing Flight Against Elements Is Related.

SEVEN ISLANDS, QUE., April 13—(INS)—The three heroes of the latest epic on the skies—Capt. Herman Koehl, Baron von Huenfeld and Major James E. Fitzmaurice—may return to civilization out of the frozen northland in the Junkers plane F-13, a sister ship of the trans-Atlantic conqueror Bremen, according to information received here today.

Fitzmaurice, who flew from Greenely Island with aviator Charles ("Duke") Schiller to get spare parts for the Bremen, so that repairs could be made rested over night at Clarke City, near this place. Schiller had sent word back to Greenely Island that he would carry the three trans-Atlantic fliers to Mitchell field or to Murray Bay, turning back from Clarke City. But up to the time this was written Schiller had not received any reply.

Land Lines Swamped Both the meager land lines and the radio are swamped by foul weather.

The storms which drove the Bremen to earth, when its gasoline supply had become practically exhausted, have continued intermittently since last Friday. Gales of wind and snow sweep the Gulf of St. Lawrence, driving dangerous ice floes through the water and darkening the air with whirling flakes. Flying conditions are perilous.

Miss Herta Junkers, who flew from Curtiss Field, N. Y., to Montreal in the F-13, traveled on to Murray Bay by rail. There is a big air depot at Murray Bay owned by Trans-Continental Airways, Ltd.

The spectacular flight of the Bremen is almost equalled in interest by the dramatic circumstances which attended the end of the historic sky voyage.

Forced down upon the surface of a frozen lake on Greenely Island after riding the clouds for 36 and one-half hours, Koehl and Von Huenfeld have maintained their vigil over their damaged machine upon the tiny, isolated and ice-bound island while the whole civilized world hungered for the details of their adventure.

More News of Adventure Fragmentary news is coming out of Point Amour, the nearest wireless station to Greenely Island, throwing fresh light upon the hazardous venture of the daring airmen.

Throughout Thursday night Koehl and Fitzmaurice, alternately at the controls, held the Bremen on her westbound course. They felt that victory was in their grasp when they ran into treacherous weather between 450 and 500 miles off the Newfoundland coast on Friday morning.

The skies were so overcast with fog—the blanket reaching 2,000 feet in the air—that the darkness of midnight settled down over the surface of the sea. It is now revealed that, except for the long, fruitless cruise over Labrador and the adjacent Atlantic while the men were lost, they could easily have made Mitchell Field. Shortly after daybreak Friday morning the Bremen passed the North American coast line. Below them they could see forests and mountains, but a fresh storm blew up and the plane's lights failed and instead of turning south the plane appears to have continued in a northwesterly direction.

Battle Headwinds For more than 10 hours after crossing the coast line the Bremen sped through the air, battling headwinds and snow and bobbing through air pockets. It was at noon on Friday that the airmen sighted the lighthouse on Greenely Island.

Gets Gun Ready When the plane was let down upon the frozen pond upon Greenely Island the airmen feared they were in an uninhabited district infested possibly by wolves. Von Hoenfeld, who carried a German army service pistol, had the weapon ready in case of an attack by wild beasts.

All three of the men were very tired. They feared they could not get news of their landing into the (Concluded On Page Two)

He also stated that Mayor Hedges would soon issue a proclamation for clean-up week, and at his suggestion the week of April 30, the first week in May was decided upon as clean-up week. Sheriff Returns Prisoner Pronto

Sheriff Frank Davis, accompanied by Miller Fissell, made a flying trip to Muncie, Indiana, where they placed under arrest Allen Floyd, wanted here for stealing a Ford touring car of the vintage of 1925, from Jerry Spangler of Tarleton. AUTOMOBILE DEVELOPMENT

THE development of the automobile business in the United States has been one of the greatest marvels of world progress. Thirty years ago, it would have seemed the most chimerical dream of imagination, if anyone had said that in 1928 so many of our people would possess automobiles, and that they would be for sale at such moderate prices that millions of wage earners would own them.

Among the factors that have been most prominent in promoting this amazing development, which has revolutionized daily life by making this form of transportation so common and accessible, has been the free use of advertising. Money has been spent with great freedom in advertising automobiles, and this expenditure has brought wealth to automobile makers and sellers, and has greatly advanced the development of these machines.

If the sale of automobiles had been pushed only according to the cautious and conservative plans of advertising common 30 years ago, it is doubtful if half as many of them would have been produced and owned today.

Put advertising has made their advantages known to every man, woman and child. The result has been to largely increase their sale, and to create such a volume of production that the cost of making them could be greatly reduced. Thus a large share of the benefits given us by automobiles is the result of advertising.

Through advertising, any line of business can be made more prosperous. When you advertise goods, you increase their sale, and you reduce the cost of doing business on them. Everyone in his own business, big or little, can get some share of the benefits of modern progress, by spending money on advertising.

EXPLOITS WITH THE RAKE

APRIL is a month that calls on the citizen to get out with his rake and give the long hair of his home grounds the combing that it needs. Raking up the yard is a very useful and cheerful exercise, and many citizens would be worthier citizens of their home town if they used this implement with more vigor about now.

Nature creates a steady product of refuge in the form of dried grass and leaves that create an appearance of disorder and decay. The home place with these accumulations looks like the boy who has forgotten to brush his hair.

The old grass keeps the young shoots from coming up, and delays the progress of that silky looking lawn you would like, which would make your home look 50 per cent better. It is astonishing how much refuge you can dig out after a winter season. Better get busy, Mr. Householder, and the improved appearance of your home will be ample compensation.

AN IMMIGRATION BILL

THE Jenkins bill, providing for the admission of relatives of immigrants to the United States, outside the quota provisions, has been favorably reported in the House of Representatives, and may become a law shortly.

Let's hope it will. Not more than 4,000 people will enter the country under this law—hardly enough to amount to any relaxation in our exclusive policy; and many hardships and heartaches will be prevented. The bill deserves support.

The flapper will soon join the "dodo" according to a Chicago woman, and if a "dodo" is what its name indicates, somebody has grounds for damages.—Zanesville, O. Signal.

ONE WEEK

THEY put just
Seven days
Into
One week
And of this fact
I'd rather like
To speak,
For all the tasks
I start
Are never done
Although I labor
Late
From morning sun;
One week to get
A firmer, stronger
Hold
Upon ambitions that
Are never told,
One week,
And far too soon it
Slips away
And here's another
Week
That's come today
And my job seems
Untouched or scarce
Begun—
Why couldn't there
Have been
More days in
This first one!—
And so it goes,
The weeks
Slip into years
And all I'm
Saving
Is my thoughts
And fears—

And what we mean to say
Is,
Too soon for us one
Week becomes one
Year,
A smile is crowded out
Because a tear
Has fallen
For the way we've
Spoiled our days,
And soon, it seems,
We're living in a
Haze—
One week! Why
Couldn't it
Have been real long
So every singer
Would have time
To end his

SYNOPSIS

Enrico de Sotano y Vasquez, proud and romantic Spaniard, claims in 1776 for King Phillip of Spain the land bordering on what is now San Francisco Bay. The Vasquez hacienda is erected on the beautiful and extensive acres overlooking the bay, and life moves along in the idyllic, carefree manner of Old Spain. In 1843 two Americans and their mother are the last of the proud line. The discovery of gold disturbs their calm existence.

"Gold!" gasped Don Hernandez in unexpressed eagerness, smiling happily at his brother.

But the head of the house replied sadly, "No, my brother, a gold rush is to be deplored. Gold awakens greed and lust—it spares no one—our laborers will leave—it will mean a social upheaval."

The youth's enthusiasm waned with his smile. He had thought only of the adventure and nothing of the disastrous consequences.

But his Mother knew and sighed, "Gold and money mean so little, my sons, they cannot buy dreams, a good name and peace."

However, these fine immaterial niceties of life meant nothing to red blooded men. Practically every able bodied male in the state, thrilled with the news and prospects of gold, rushed to the gold fields and you can't stop us—this is a new era—the world's turned upside down, and now you and your family glory don't mean a damn thing."

"You shall not leave the Vasquez estate on stolen horses unless you ride me down."

join the new progressive enterprise or sell their aristocratic fingers in gold digging.

As soon as the news was passed on by galloping horsemen the gold rush became an actuality.

Unwilling to admit the menace, Senora Vasquez turned into the hacienda with her sons. Their guests were due, shortly, and they must be ready to extend every hospitality.

No sooner had they left the patio than a faithful peon came running in breathlessly and stopped before them to whisper of his soiled cap and gasp in great agitation: "In the stable yard, señor—Captain Stoner and his sailor men—steal your horses!"

"The fiends!" snapped Vasquez angrily.

Don Hernandez, agitated by an equal anger, leaped to his feet and raced headlong down the stairs. It was a call to arms!

"Wait, my brother," called the elder, "I am the head of the house of Vasquez! You remain with our Mother and leave weighty matters to me."

With this reminder he disappeared in the house. Hardly a moment elapsed before he returned, brandishing the great sword of the Vasquez.

The same splendid blade that had been plunged into San Francisco ground by their illustrious ancestor seventy-two years earlier.

Don Hernandez was crestfallen and disappointed at being denied a chance to share in the excitement and avenge their name, but obedience to the head of the family had always been the first law of Spain. He reluctantly remained at his Mother's side.

Coming around the building with grim determined step the elder brother halted at sight of such feverish activity in the stable yard.

A gruff, burly, bewhiskered man of forty was Captain Stoner, and he appeared as much in command of the situation as if he had been on the bridge of his ship at sea.

"You greedy swabs!" he thundered at the terrified peons, "throw some saddles on those horses' backs and tighten up the belly straps!"

They covered before this verbal lash and waited upon the impatient Captain and his sailors like helpless galley slaves.

One loyal and courageous little servant grasped the bridle of his Master's favorite horse when he saw that Captain Stoner was about to mount and ride him away without permission.

"Spawn of the Devil!" cursed Stoner, "cast off!" and he knuckled the peon backward with a cruel blow.

The helpless heap of abused humanity rolled and fell unconscious at Vasquez's feet.

"Captain Stoner! What does this mean?" demanded the young master, his Spanish eyes flashing with righteous fury.

"It means we've worked for you long enough," Stoner eyed his youthful employer with deadly calm. "You'll find your ship at anchor in the bay. We've resigned and are taking our pay in horses—understand?"

Like a true son of a long line of proud aristocrats, Vasquez stood his ground. "Stoner, you forget that I am head of the House of Vasquez." His eyes took on a deadly gleam. "I order you to replace my property and return to your ship at once."

He waited with all the assurance of a small child who has asked a cow to give him a glass of milk and is surprised when his bidding is not immediately obeyed.

"You jellyfish!" hissed Stoner in contempt, "I've been going to the gold fields and you can't stop us—this is a new era—the world's turned upside down, and now you and your family glory don't mean a damn thing."

A quick intake of breath was followed by an amazed silence and Vasquez stood stunned by Stoner's defiance.

"All aboard for the gold fields, men!" signalled the Captain, and his sailors climbed into their saddles.

Vasquez suddenly regained his senses and sprang into the arroyo way to bar their departure with his body.

"You shall not leave the Vasquez estate on stolen horses unless you ride me down." It was a grand gesture, devoid of all pretense and show—he meant it. The sun shone blindingly on the famous Vasquez sword as he held it high in his out-fung arm.

The sailors pulled in their horses to a dead stop and eyed their Captain inquiringly.

Stoner did not mount, but his mind was made up. The defiance of a romantic Spaniard was not going to alter his plans. Whipping out a pistol he fired—in cold blood—at the brave youth who was defending property and name with his very life.

A blood red spot grew on the breast of Vasquez's soft white shirt. He swayed on his feet. His left hand crept up—not to ease the pain but to stop his life's blood from oozing out until he had had a chance to prove that his eyes could still see and that his right hand was still strong and true enough to avenge the insult.

The report of Stoner's cowardly shot echoed in Senora Vasquez's heart. Instinctively she knew that it had found its mark in her son. Don Hernandez heard, it too, and without hesitancy rushed around the hacienda eager to take his place beside his brother.

Back in the stable yard the peon laborers and vaqueros were huddled together in fear and trembling, the sailors were stunned into silence, but Captain Stoner—a leech upon his big loose lips—blew through the smoking barrel of his revolver with gloating satisfaction.

Summoning the last bit of his remaining strength, Vasquez lunged toward Stoner with drawn sword. His mouth, distorted with pain, opened pitifully to cry out, "A Vasquez avenges a Vasquez!" but the strain was too great and he fell tottering to the tiled floor.

FEWER HORSES ON FARMS, AND PRICES GO UP

Drop From 910,000 in 1910 to 542,000 in 1928 in This State.

WOOSTER, O., April 18—There are fewer horses in use on farms in Ohio and, in fact, the nation at large, this year than at any time since the Civil War according to the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station here.

Motor power, which has reduced the once highly respected equine from the proud position he held two decades ago, is gradually supplanting him on the farm, his last stronghold, the experiment station statistics reveal.

The horse population has fallen from 910,000, on Ohio farms in 1910, to 542,000, January 1, 1928. In 1860, there were 625,340 horses in the state, or 83,246 more than on January 1, of this year.

The drop in numbers, however, has begun to affect the prices for horses, according to J. I. Falconer, chief of the department of rural economics of the experiment station. In the last two years prices of farm horses have become gradually higher, Falconer says.

Available statistics indicate that the present number of colts will fall far short of maintaining the present number of farm horses.

In 1919 the number of colts foaled per thousand horses and mules on the farms and ranges of the United States was 91. In 1919 the average number was only 42, a decline of more than half. Falconer points out. In the East, North and Central states the numbers were even smaller, being 74 in 1910 and 32 in 1927.

It is astonishing how much refuge you can dig out after a winter season. Better get busy, Mr. Householder, and the improved appearance of your home will be ample compensation.

AN IMMIGRATION BILL

THE Jenkins bill, providing for the admission of relatives of immigrants to the United States, outside the quota provisions, has been favorably reported in the House of Representatives, and may become a law shortly.

Let's hope it will. Not more than 4,000 people will enter the country under this law—hardly enough to amount to any relaxation in our exclusive policy; and many hardships and heartaches will be prevented. The bill deserves support.

The flapper will soon join the "dodo" according to a Chicago woman, and if a "dodo" is what its name indicates, somebody has grounds for damages.—Zanesville, O., Signal.

ONE WEEK

THEY put just Seven days

Into

One week

And of this fact

I'd rather like

To speak,

For all the tasks

I start

Are never done

Although I labor

Late

From morning sun;

One week to get

A firmer, stronger

Hold

Upon ambitions that

Are never told,

One week,

And far too soon it

Slips away

And here's another

Week

That's come today

And my job seems

Untouched or scarce

Why couldn't there

Have been

More days in

This first one!

And so it goes,

The weeks

Slip into years

And all I'm

Saving

Is my thoughts

And fears—

And what we mean to say

Is,

Too soon for us one

Week becomes one

Year,

A smile is crowded out

Because a tear

Has fallen

For the way we've

Spoiled our days,

And soon, it seems,

We're living in a

Haze—

One week! Why

Couldn't it

Have been real long

So every singer

Would have time

To end his

Song!

There's a reason for so many

SYNOPSIS

Enrico de Solano y Vasquez, proud and romantic Spaniard, claims in 1776 for King Phillip of Spain the land bordering on what is now San Francisco Bay. The Vasquez hacienda is erected on the beautiful and extensive acres overlooking the bay, and life moves along in the idyllic, carefree manner of Old Spain. In 1828 two treacherous and their mother are the last of the proud line. The discovery of gold disturbs their calm existence.

"Gold!" gasped Don Hernandez in unsuppressed eagerness, smiling happily at his brother.

But the head of the house replied sadly, "No, my brother, a gold rush is to be deplored. Gold awakens greed and lust—it spares no one—our laborers will leave—it will mean a social upheaval."

The youth's enthusiasm waned with his smile. He had thought only of the adventure and nothing of the disastrous consequences.

But his Mother knew and sighed, "Gold and money mean so little, my sons, they cannot buy dreams, a good name and peace."

However, these fine immaterial niceties of life meant nothing to red blooded men. Practically every able bodied male in the state, thrilled with the news and prospects of gold, pulled up stakes and hit the trail to Sutter's Mill. That is, with the exception of the Spaniards, who with their usual love of lazy indolence and ease, failed to

One loyal and courageous little servant grasped the bride of his Master's favorite horse when he saw that Captain Stoner was about to mount and ride him away without permission.

"Spawn of the Devil!" cursed Stoner, "cast off!" and he knocked the peon backward with a cruel blow.

The helpless heap of abused humanity rolled and fell unconscious at Vasquez's feet.

"Captain Stoner! What does this mean?" demanded the young master, his Spanish eyes flashing with righteous fury.

"It means we've worked for you long enough," Stoner eyed his youthful employer with deadly calm. "You'll find your ship at anchor in the bay. We've resigned and are taking our pay in horses—understand?"

The sailors mounted on saddled steeds, gave mute evidence of the fact.

Like a true son of a long line of proud aristocrats, Vasquez stood his ground. "Stoner, you forget that I am head of the House of Vasquez." His eyes took on a deadly glint. "I order you to replace my property and return to your ship at once."

He waited with all the assurance of a small child who has asked a cow to give him a glass of milk and is surprised when his bidding is not immediately obeyed.

"You jellyfish!" hissed Stoner in contempt, "we're going to the gold fields and you can't stop us—this is a new era—the world's turned upside down, and now you and your family glory don't mean a damn thing."

"You shall not leave the Vasquez estate on stolen horses unless you ride me down."

join the new progressive enterprise or sell their aristocratic fingers in gold digging.

As soon as the news was passed on by galloping horsemen the gold rush became an actuality.

Unwilling to admit the menace, Senora Vasquez turned into the hacienda with her sons. Their guests were due, shortly, and they must be ready to extend every hospitality.

No sooner had they left the patio than a faithful peon came running in breathlessly and stopped before them to whisper of his soiled cap and gasp in great agitation: "In the stable yard, señor—Captain Stoner and his sailor men—steal your horses!"

"The fiends!" snapped Vasquez angrily.

Don Hernandez, agitated by an equal anger, leaped to his feet and raced headlong down the stairs. It was a call to arms!

"Wait, my brother," called the elder, "I am the head of the house of Vasquez! You remain with our Mother and leave weighty matters to me."

With this reminder he disappeared in the house. Hardly a moment elapsed before he returned brandishing the great sword of the Vasquez. The same splendid blade that had been plucked into San Francisco ground by their illustrious ancestor seventy-two years earlier.

Don Hernandez was crestfallen and disappointed at being denied a chance to share in the excitement and avenge their name, but obedience to the head of the family had always been the first law of Spanish life. He reluctantly remained at his Mother's side.

Coming around the building with grim determined step the elder laborers halted at sight of such feverish activity in the stable yard.

A gruff, burly, bewhiskered man of forty was Captain Stoner, and he appeared as much in command of the situation as if he had been on the bridge of his ship at sea.

"You groovy swabs!" he thundered at the terrified peons, "throw some saddles on those horses' backs and tighten up the belly straps!"

They covered before this verbal lash and waited upon the impatient Captain and his sailors like helpless galley slaves.

A quick intake of breath was followed by an amazed silence and Vasquez stood stunned by Stoner's defiance.

"All aboard for the gold fields, men!" signalled the Captain, and his sailors climbed into their saddles.

Vasquez suddenly regained his senses and sprang into the archway to bar their departure with his body.

"You shall not leave the Vasquez estate on stolen horses unless you ride me down." It was a grand gesture, devoid of all pretense and show—he meant it. The sun shone blindingly on the famous Vasquez sword as he held it high in his outflung arm.

The sailors pulled in their horses to a dead stop and eyed their Captain inquiringly.

Stoner did not mount, but his mind was made up. The defiance of a romantic Spaniard was not going to alter his plans. Whipping out a pistol he fired—in cold blood—at the brave youth who was defending property and name with his very life.

A blood red spot grew on the breast of Vasquez's soft white shirt. He swayed on his feet. His left hand crept up—not to ease the pain but to stop his life's blood from oozing out until he had had a chance to prove that his eyes could still see and that his right hand was still strong and true enough to avenge the insult.

The report of Stoner's cowardly shot echoed in Senora Vasquez's heart. Instinctively she knew that it had found its mark in her son. Don Hernandez heard, it too, and without hesitancy rushed around the hacienda eager to take his place beside his brother.

Back in the stable yard the peon laborers and vaqueros were huddled together in fear and trembling, the sailors were stunned into silence, but Captain Stoner—a leering, his big loose lips—blew through the smoking barrel of his revolver with gloating satisfaction.

Summoning the last bit of his remaining strength, Vasquez lunged toward Stoner with drawn sword. His mouth, distorted with pain, opened pitifully to cry out, "A Vasquez avenges a Vasquez!" but the strain was too great and he fell tottering to the tiled floor.

Mr. and Mrs. Flesher of Columbus, Mr. and Mrs. Cary Dean of Austin, and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Stewart and daughter Betty, of New Holland were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ward Dean, last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Noel Wright and children of Columbus, and Lew Schneider of Circleville were visitors Sunday afternoon with Glen Skinner and family.

The campaign of the Union Herald and Watchman and The Herald proved very interesting to the readers, the past few weeks. Following are those who received handsome prizes:

The first one called was Dewey, Who won the Buick grand. We think he sure did earn it. For he canvassed all the land.

Next came forth Miss Jacob, So fair, light hearted and gay, And when the votes were counted She won the Chevrolet.

The third was Mrs. Justice The Living Room Suite she got. She surely looked delighted For she wanted it a lot.

Then came Mrs. Gussman, With an ever cheerful grin, She got the Dining Room Suite When all her votes were in.

The fifth was Mrs. Bennett, Who loves music all the while And when she won the Brunswick She smiled and smiled.

And the last was Mrs. Wright, She, the little watch did win; It surely was a beauty, So very neat and trim.

Were you ever in a contest? You get a mighty "thrill," But when a friend deceives you It is such a bitter pill.

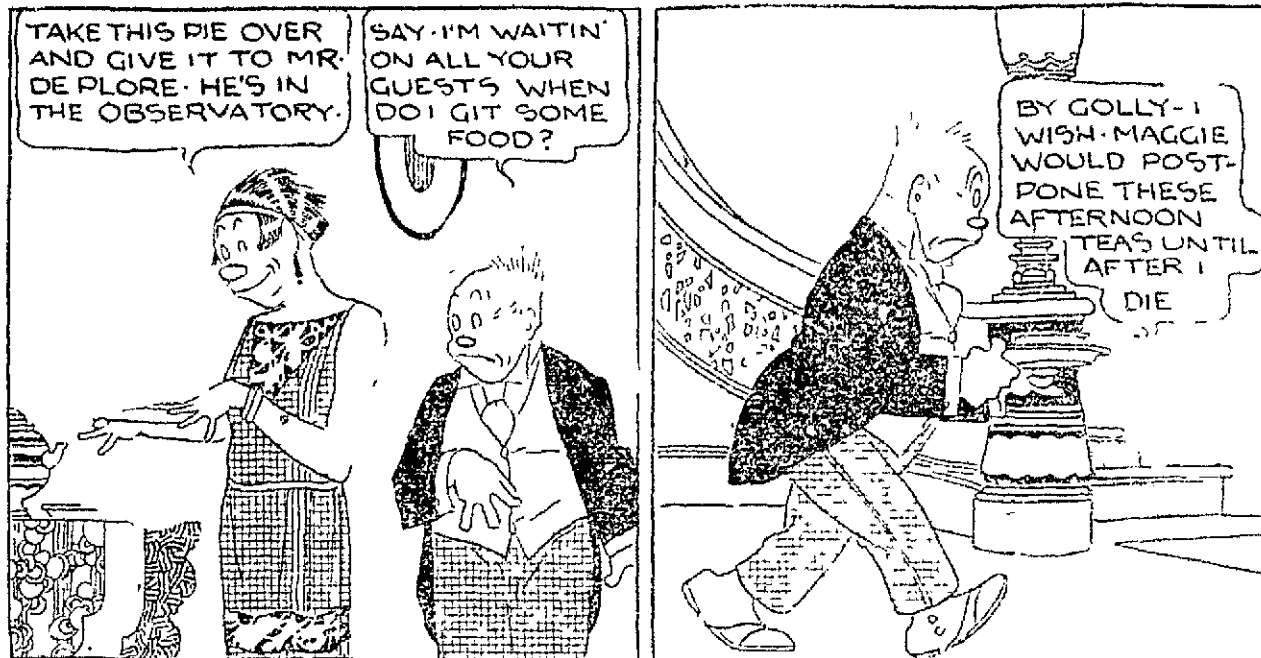

But we are all so thankful, To those who helped us win; For without co-operation, It never could have been.

Atlanta

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Arnott of Greenfield spent Saturday with William Bennett and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Fleisher of Columbus, Mr. and Mrs. Cary Dean of Austin, and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Stewart and daughter Betty, of New Holland were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ward Dean, last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Noel Wright and children of Columbus, and Low Schneider of Circleville were visitors Sunday afternoon with Glen Skinner and family.

The campaign of the Union Herald and Watchman and The Herald proved very interesting to the readers, the past few weeks. Following are those who received handsome prizes:

The first one called was Dewey, Who won the Buick grand. We think he sure did earn it. For he canvassed all the land.

Next came forth Miss Jacob, So fair, light hearted and gay, And when the votes were counted She won the Chevrolet.

The third was Mrs. Justice The Living Room Suite she got. She surely looked delighted For she wanted it a lot.

Then came Mrs. Gussman, With an ever cheerful grin, She got the Dining Room Suite When all her votes were in.

The fifth was Mrs. Bennett, Who loves music all the while, And when she won the Brunswick She smiled and smiled and smiled.

And the last was Mrs. Wright, She, the little watch did win; It surely was a beauty, So very neat and trim.

Were you ever in a contest? You get a mighty "thrill," But when a friend deceives you It is such a bitter pill.

But we are all so thankful, To those who helped us win; For without co-operation, It never could have been.

HEENEY COULD HARDLY PICTURE FIGHT WITH GENE

BUT TEX SAYS IT'S TRUE SO TOM ENTHUSES

Fighter Who Is to Meet World Champ Taking It Easy in London.

By SID MERCER

NEW YORK, April 18 — Although official announcement has been made more than two weeks ago that Tex Rickard has selected Tom Heenev as Gene Tunney's next opponent, Heenev himself was not convinced that the news was true until he received a cable last Monday from his American manager, Charley Harvey.

Honest Tom at present is sojourning in London, and is loath to abandon the joys of the "arf and arf" to take ship to New York, where a long training grind awaits him.

Although Thomas has been extensively quoted on his prospects against Tunney, he apparently was not quite sure that he wasn't dreaming, for only last Thursday he dispatched his first cable to Harvey.

Sends Cabled Assurance
"Is Tunney fight definitely on, and when?" inquired Tom, who had not heard from Harvey for some time.

Harvey did not receive this message until he returned from Miami last Saturday. The next day he sent a cabled assurance that the Tunney fight was certainly "on" for next July, and added that Tex Rickard insisted on Heenev returning on the next boat.

"I guess Tom couldn't quite realize how far he has climbed in a year," said Harvey today. "He has prospered beyond his wildest imagination, and maybe he couldn't realize that after he sailed away he had been chosen over all the American contenders."

"I am sure Tom will be here by the end of this month. If I can make satisfactory arrangements he will train in Atlantic City."

Rickard said it was "practically settled" that New York would get the big fight.

Hasn't Set Date
"I ain't ready yet to name the date," he stated. "Maybe in another week I can tell. I want to work out a price scale. I am convinced the fight will draw at least $1,500,000 at the Yankee stadium or the polo grounds. The international angle will help it a lot. And don't go wrong in thinking Tunney won't draw. He has a big following among people who want those front seats."

Rickard recalled the skepticism over his estimate of a $1,000,000 gate for the Dempsey-Carpenter fight in 1921 as he assayed the Tunney-Heenev attraction.

"Even Jack Kearns thought I was crazy. Billy Brady and Charley Cochran stepped out and Kearns thought he was driving a sharp bargain when he insisted on a flat guarantee of $300,000. The fight drew $1,628,000 and Mr. Kearns outsmarted himself out of about $300,000 which he might have had on a percentage arrangement."

"I don't think anyone will dispute me when I say that Heenev rates a far better chance against Tunney now than Tunney did against Dempsey two years ago. No champion is invincible. I think Heenev will be well supported and I will be surprised if the odds on Tunney to win are any more than 2 to 1. Dempsey was 4 to 1 over Tunney the first time and even money last fall."

LEVY AND COHEN HAVE BEEN SPLIT

NEW YORK, April 18 — (INS) — The fortunes of baseball have separated Jake Levy and Andy Cohen, the Damon and Pythias of the New York Giants.

Levy and Andy were both pals and rivals. Andy is a pitcher and Levy a second baseman, but each was anxious to fill the bill as the Jewish diamond star whom John McGraw has sought for years. Cohen has made a hit here as a drawing card and player that Jake got the gate. He has been sent to the Hartford Conn. Club in the off-season.

Another Baseball Circuit Is Opened

NEW YORK, April 18 — (INS) — The 1928 baseball season of the International League starts today with nearly all of the eight clubs having a chance to win the pennant. The league has been reorganized and has been placed on a new and most successful basis.

The New York club managed by Walter Johnson is favored to finish in first place although it is crippled by injuries. At present Former Major League players on the Newark team include Jacques Fournier, Hugh McQuinn, Bill Lamar and Rube Lutzke.

Jack Kearns, who once managed the business affairs of Jack Dempsey and now is engaged in trying to separate the former heavyweight champion from approximately $600,000 of what might be jokingly known as the latter's "wad" insists that all the talk about Dempsey returning to the ring is just so much nonsense.

"He isn't going to take any chances on that," says the dapper young man familiarly known as "The Doc."

Time was when "The Doc" spoke for Dempsey, and what he said went for the former heavyweight champion. Time was—ah, yes, but not IS. Jack Dempsey now does the talking for himself, except when Estelle Taylor takes a hand in the conversation, and "The Doc's" views on what may or may not happen in fistfuffs this year is worth just about as much as Charley Stoneham's estimate of Rogers Hornsby as a ball player.

Kearns naturally would do everything possible to disparage his former protegee, and his comments may be taken as biased.

If Jack Dempsey thinks that he can risk life, limb and ears for the sake of a quarter of a million bucks, he will engage Gene Tunney in combat once more, with the heavyweight championship of the world at stake.

At the same time, it is just as well to consider the other side of the question. Dempsey has been warned by reputable physicians that he might lose his eye-sight if he went through another ten rounds or so with the present champion. That Dempsey would receive a severe beating goes without saying. No one who witnessed the fight at Philadelphia in which the heavyweight championship changed hands, and the fight at Chicago in which it did not, has any doubt as to which of the two is the better man.

But a quarter of a million bucks is a different story altogether. Tex Rickard probably could guarantee Jack that amount for a return engagement, because the motion pictures of the Chicago fight made a number of Dempsey converts, and there always are those who like to refer to the so-called "long count."

CHELSEA, OKLA., April 18—C. C. Pyle's bunion derbyists buckled to another fifty-one miles of gravel road as they pushed on today toward Miami, their forty-sixth control, and final day's travel in Oklahoma.

Andrew Payne, idol of this state again took the lead a short distance out of Tulsa and when he passed through Claremore, his home town, he received an ovation befitting a national hero.

Payne has covered the 1669.6 miles from Los Angeles in 279:10:52, giving him a lead of 1:56:23 over Peter Gavuzzi, of Southampton, England.

45,000 TO SEE REDS

CHICAGO, April 18—(INS)—A crowd of 45,000 fans—the largest ever to witness a National League ball game in Chicago—was expected to sit in today for the Cubs home season opener. Cincinnati Reds will furnish the opposition.

The weather was chilly but dry.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE

date," he stated. "Mebbe in another week I can tell. I want to work out a price scale. I am convinced the fight will draw at least $1,500,000 at the Yankee stadium or the polo grounds. The international angle will help it a lot. And don't go wrong in thinking Tunney won't draw. He has a big following among people who want those front seats."

Rickard recalled the skepticism over his estimate of a $1,000,000 gate for the Dempsey-Carpentier fight in 1921 as he assayed the Tunney-Heeneey attraction.

"Even Jack Kearns thought I was crazy. Billy Brady and Charley Cochran stepped out and Kearns thought he was driving a sharp bargain when he insisted on a flat guarantee of $300,000. The fight drew $1,628,000 and Mr. Kearns outsmarted himself out of about $300,000 which he might have had on a percentage arrangement."

"I don't think anyone will dispute me when I say that Heeneey rates a far better chance against Tunney now than Tunney did against Dempsey two years ago. No champion is invincible. I think Heeneey will be well supported and I will be surprised if the odds on Tunney to win are any more than 2 to 1. Dempsey was 4 to 1 over Tunney the first time and even money last fall."

LEVY AND COHEN HAVE BEEN SPLIT

NEW YORK, April 18—(INS)—The fortunes of baseball have separated Jake Levy and Andy Cohen, the Damon and Pythias of the New York Giants.

Jake and Andy were both pals and rivals. Jake is a pitcher and Andy a second baseman, but each was anxious to fill the bill as the Jewish diamond star whom John McGraw has sought for years. Cohen has made a hit here as a drawing card and player that Jake got the gate. He has been sent to the Hartford, Conn., club in the eastern league.

Another Baseball Circuit Is Opened

NEW YORK, April 18—(INS)—The 168 game baseball season of the International League starts today with nearly all of the eight clubs conceded a chance to win the pennant. The weaker clubs, notably Reading, have been strengthened and a most successful season is anticipated.

The Newark club, managed by Walter Johnson, is favored to finish in first place although it is crippled by injuries at present. Former Major League players on the Newark team include Jacques Fournier, Hugh McQuillan, Bill Lamar and Rube Lutzke.

COLUMBIA HAPPY

NEW YORK, April 18—(INS)—The Columbia crew today was sanguine of retaining its title honors at the Poughkeepsie regatta this year. Horace Davenport, veteran No. 7, recovered from an appendicitis operation in good shape and rejoined the crew.

SPORTSMATTER

BY FRANK GETTY

Jack Kearns, who once managed the business affairs of Jack Dempsey and now is engaged in trying to separate the former heavyweight champion from approximately $800,000 of what might be jokingly known as the latter's "wad" insists that all the talk about Dempsey returning to the ring is just so much nonsense.

Dempsey, Kearns tells us, always had a horror of being knocked goofy, or, as you might say, punch drunk.

"He isn't going to take any chances on that," says the dapper young man familiarly known as "The Doc."

Time was when "The Doc" spoke for Dempsey, and what he said went for the former heavyweight champion. Time was—ah, yes, but not is. Jack Dempsey now does the talking for himself, except when Estelle Taylor takes a hand in the conversation, and "The Doc's" views on what may or may not happen in fistfights this year is worth just about as much as Charley Stoneham's estimate of Rogers Hornsby as a ball player.

Kearns naturally would do everything possible to disparage his former protegee, and his comments may be taken as biased.

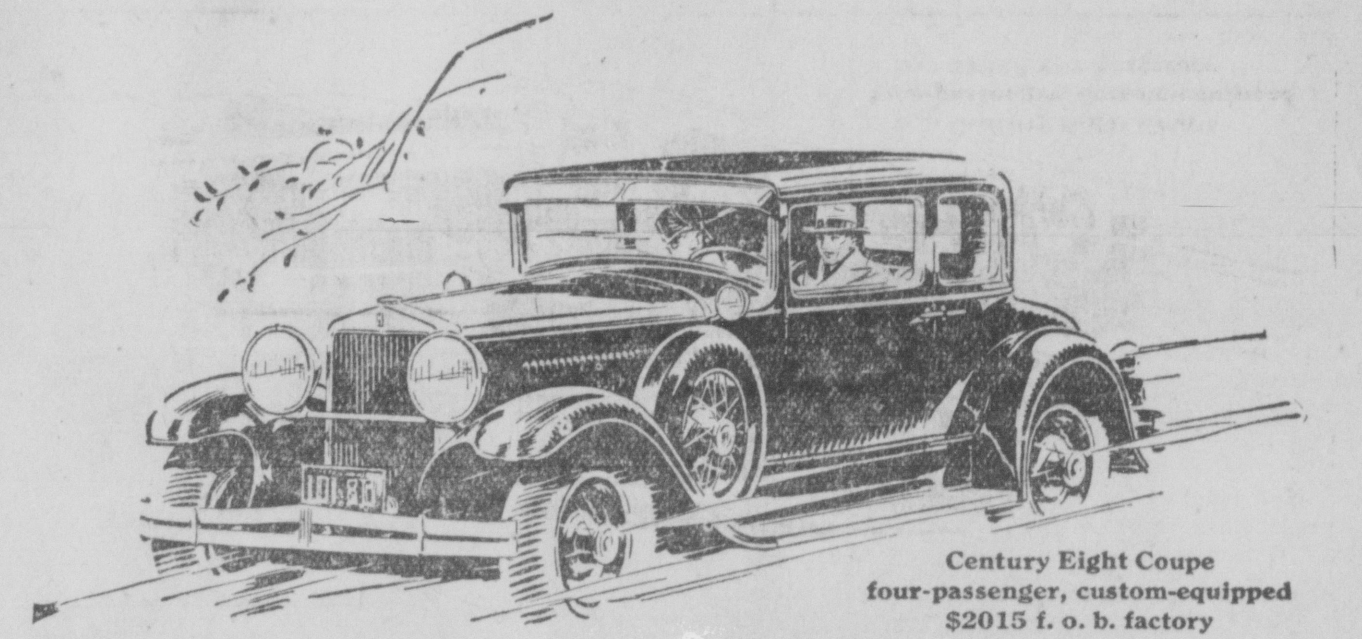

If Jack Dempsey thinks that he can risk life, limb and ears for the sake of a quarter of a million bucks, he will engage Gene Tunney in combat once more, with the heavyweight championship of the world at stake.

At the same time, it is just as well to consider the other side of the question. Dempsey has been warned by reputable physicians that he might lose his eye-sight if he went through another ten rounds or so with the present champion. That Dempsey would receive a severe beating goes without saying. No one who witnessed the fight at Philadelphia in which the heavyweight championship changed hands, and the fight at Chicago in which it did not, has any doubt as to which of the two is the better man.

But a quarter of a million bucks is a different story altogether. Tex Rickard probably could guarantee Jack that amount for a return engagement, because the motion pictures of the Chicago fight made a number of Dempsey converts, and there always are those who like to refer to the so-called "long count."
